A park designed just for pets is expected to open soon in Charlotte. The park will be a way for dogs to get more exercise and for their owners to ___31___. Caroline Huggins walks her dog ___32___ what will soon be Charlotte's first 2-acre dog park. "We're just trying to raise enough money for the fence, need about 10,000 more dollars. If we could get that, it would be open now," said Huggins. The idea of a dog park started about three years ago when FIDO (Fellowship in Dog Ownership) formed. Today, there are about 800 local members ___33___ to making a leash-free area for dogs to play together. The first area will be in a tree-filled area at McAlpine Park. "Dogs don't get enough exercise by themselves in the back yard," said Huggins. Before you take off your dog's leash and let them run free you need to become a member. Membership includes an annual fee, ___34___ with the county and proof your dog has its rabies shots. If the park is a success, it is possible to see other parks ___35___ to the dogs in the city. "I would hope within a couple of years to have 4 or 5 dog parks around the county so people would have a lot of options for their pets," said Brian Cox of the Mecklenburg County Park & Recreation department. Pictures of other city's dog parks are a part of research Brian Cox uses for our ___36___. He says safety's really been the only concern, but does not expect is to be a problem. "Typically people gone to the trouble having dogs ___37___ and licensed usually have good control over their dog and should reduce chance of an accident or bite," Cox said. "They're probably 10 times more dog owners in Charlotte than soccer players and Frisbee golf players, dog owners need their parks as well." Because it is up to FIDO to fund the first park, ___38___ fees with access cards will help pay for future parks. An amount has not been set, but it will likely be between $25 and $40 a year.
