Questions 35-38

A-chi is one of the most famous chefs in Taiwan. When you see him cooking on television, you can't help but feel great respect for his professionalism, confidence, and vibrant personality. In real life, however, he shows a sharp contrast to his television personality by coming across as a kind and humble person. A-chi has worked with food for forty years. His experiences range from being head chef for the president's state banquets to writing numerous books and lecturing at universities. He is able to accomplish all of this due to his love of food and endless research. As a young boy, A-chi loved being in his parents' noodle shop. By the fifth grade, he was cooking stir-fry for houseguests. In high school, A-chi knew that he wanted to go into the cooking profession. This enraged his father at first, but his mother's persistent persuasion won his father over. With his father's approval, A-chi set off to become a chef.

- ( ) 35. How does the author describe A-chi's television personality?
A. Loud and rude high-speed trains, Japan's Shinkansen, first began operation in 1964. After World War II, these bullet trains not only helped the country's economy bounce back but fundamentally changed it as well. The travel time between Tokyo and Osaka was reduced from six hours to three hours and ten minutes. This helped increase both trade and travel between these two important cities. Other cities along the high-speed rail line saw growth, with business centers springing up near the high-speed rail stations. Aware of Japan's success, France established its own high-speed rail line, and its TGV has pushed into Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, and other countries in Europe.

- ( ) 39. Which country was the first to establish a high-speed train?
A. France B. The United Kingdom
C. Japan D. The United States
- ( ) 40. How did the new train benefit Japan?
A. People could travel to new countries.
B. It became a model for other countries to follow.
C. It helped significantly improve the economy.
D. It gave people something to get excited about.
- ( ) 41. What is mentioned about France's high-speed train?
A. It has pushed into other countries in Europe.
B. It helped the country recover after World War II.
C. It is among the fastest of the high-speed trains.
D. Japan has copied its high-speed trains.
- ( ) 42. How much time did the new Shinkansen service save on the trip between Tokyo and Osaka?
A. Six hours B. Four hours and twenty minutes
C. Three hours D. Two hours and fifty minutes

Questions 43-46

Sit up straight! That's what your parents and teachers always tell you. It's not only polite, but also good for your back, digestion, and alertness. Conventional wisdom held this to be an undisputed truth for many years, but sitting up straight may not be all that great for you. For one thing, sitting at a ninety-degree angle puts a lot of pressure on your back. Researchers used MRI technology to discover that sitting up straight can lead to pinched nerves and slipped disks. For anyone who must remain seated for a long time, like students or office workers, sitting at an angle of 135 degrees is best. That's because this position puts the least amount of pressure on your back and best preserves the shape of the bones in your back. Researchers suggest learning back slightly and putting a small pillow behind your back.

- ( ) 43. What is not mentioned as a reason why people have tried to sit up straight?
- A. They were always told to do so by their parents and teachers.
- B. It's simply more natural for people to sit up straight.
- C. It was supposed to be better for the health of your back.
- D. The food you ate could travel through your body more easily.
- ( ) 44. What has new research discovered about sitting up straight?
- A. If you sit up straight, you will be taller and stronger.
